“ I do remember a few things that stick out like how he was extremely overprotective of me when I was born and would not let anyone near me unless they wore masks and/or gloves.

I also remember Dad teaching me how to fly a kite and spending time with me even though he was exhausted from working 7 days a week and sometimes multiple jobs, not to mention having to fix his own vehicles to even get to work at times.

I also remember him not only getting me my first gaming console which was an Atari that he had saved all year to get, but I remember him taking the time to sit and play the games with me. Once he knew I loved games and took to gaming he then saved up every year and surprised me with my first Nintendo and later the other consoles like Super Nintendo and Sega even. He would try to get a few games a year as well usually during Christmas or Birthdays. I remember he even took me all over Prestonsburg looking for a specific game one time, and we found it eventually. We had to pay a premium for it from a Rental place, but he made sure I got it. He is the reason I became a gamer and wanted to create them and I still may someday. On that note games are how I met my wife so Dad was one of the main reasons I met my wife as well.

He would also get me buckets of lego's and sit with me when he had time and help me build stuff with them. He eventually helped me build all kinds of stuff for school fairs and even taught me how to do basic repairs and construction to a degree later on. He also would sit with me and watch cartoons like He-Man, which was one of my favorites and we also enjoyed watching Looney Toons. I even remember him acting out Bugs Bunny and Porky Pig and a few others like Elmer Fud I believe, just to make me laugh. He had an amazing sense of humor and always would know how to cheer me up if I was having a bad day with my health or otherwise. I remember Dad being an amazing Dad every chance he got.

He always made sure we had everything we ever needed or even sometimes wanted even if we didn't realize it. More than anything he was my hero. He saved us sooo many times when we needed it most and most of the time to his own detriment, but he would always put us first if he knew we needed him.

I have tons of other stories and memories and could go on for days but I will just say that I will miss him greatly but I take solace in the fact that he is reunited with Mom and they both don't have to deal with the horrible health issues and problems they faced here anymore, and can finally rest and be at peace together.
