“Freddie was a trusting soul, passionate and loyal to his family and friends, and he was filled with confidence. He now resides with our heavenly father but his legacy lives on through his children. Fred’s trusting soul lives in his daughter Kelly, His passion is with us through his son Matthew and his confidence remains through his son Kyle. The world is a better place for having Freddie in it.

“Like most of us Freddie endured a hard life, he never had a positive father figure to help guide him. However he did have a wonderful mother, but she was very ill as Fred grew and unlike the rest of us Freddie lost her before he turned 12 years old. He missed out on the benefit of her wisdom. For Fred there were no bedside talks with mom like I remember so well.

As a man Fred was a hard worker, Focused and confident at times perhaps overly confident. It was his generous nature and confidence that led to his demise, for he was trying to help someone who is a lost cause. He was saved and Baptist at the hospital I have no doubt that he is with mom enjoying those bedside chats now.
