“ Dinah, everyone in our family is heartbroken to hear about the loss of Lori. She was a beautiful and sweet girl. I know there are no words to help bare the pain all of you are feeling. I'm sending you a hug from mom. She loved you so much and I grew up hearing stories about you and her. Praying God will give you all comfort, peace and strength in the days to come. I know I could never take the pain away but I'm here if you need anything. I love you all.

“ though i only knew her for a few years, the times in which i did see her will always stick with me. she was kind and patient when i'd come around, never questioning my shyness and always inviting me into any conversation she'd be having with the others outside in the yard. she was unbelievably kind and always willing to let me play with the dogs on the rare occasions i did stop by. she knew my parents, they were friends. she was kind to them and so very kind to me and i cannot imagine the heartbreak this family is feeling. i am so sorry for your loss

“Lori was my first cousin and I'm still almost in disbelief of this being real. I never had any siblings so she was the closest thing to a sister that I ever had.

She was 7 years older than me but when we were young she treated me as if there was no age difference at all. She introduced me to so many amazing movies, music, and games back then that heavily influenced my tastes for life. I thought she was just the funnest person to be around and I always looked forward to seeing her.

I couldn't stand the country music singer Terri Sue Clark as a kid and Lori would always tease me about that and call me "Natalie Sue Clark" which would irritate me back then but over time I just lovingly accepted it lol.

I always loved certain mannerisms of hers like the hilarious facial expressions she'd make at irony and bad luck which we had plenty of. We'd often crack up and laugh hysterically at the silliest stuff and her sense of humor is one of the things I'm going to miss the most.

It's tough to really know what to say other than I'm praying for the family to have some divine guidance through this. There's not a long list of people I love but Lori was certainly one of them.

“ I really am saddened by the news of Lori passing away my prayers and love is with her husband kids and family. I remember the first time I met Lori was on the burning fork school bus and she was older than me but I thought she was beautiful when I first saw her and thought because I was younger like in middle school and her a senior in high school that she wouldn't want to be my friend or talk to me but to my surprise on the evening home riding the bus we go to the high school to pick up high school students and Lori got on and asked if she could sit with me so I scooted over and was shy and she looks over at me and asked me my name and if I enjoyed school that day. So I told her and I told her she was pretty and I liked how she put her makeup on. She said do you wear makeup or does your parents let you I replied yeah but I don't know how to do it like you do and she said well tomorrow morning save me a seat with you and I will bring my makeup and do your makeup on the bus like mine if you want me to. I said yes and was so excited that not only was she popular and pretty but she was nice to and I could barely control myself not to act so excited that she was going to do my makeup and I got off our bus and ran and told my mamaw all about her. Mamaw just said well that was kind of her . I couldn't hardly sleep that night for thinking about her doing my makeup for me and the next morning she got on the bus and she did my makeup and redone my hair for me and just like that we became friends. Although she only rode the bus a few times we stayed in contact and when she rode our bus she only sit with me even when her boyfriend Mike who she married got on the bus sometimes with her he would have to sit behind us and she spent the bus ride home talking and laughing with me. I looked up to her and I loved her so much. She was the same person no matter who she was around. The best and kindest person who showed love and care for anyone she met. She made a difference in my life and she gave me advice and she was the reason I learned to be confident in myself and who taught me how to put makeup on. I will never forget her and will always think of her. I love you Lori fly high my friend now you can be an angel in heaven as you were always here on earth.

“ Losing someone you love is a quiet kind of heartbreak that lingers long after the moment has passed. Even when life moves forward and days begin to look different, their presence stays woven into who you are. You carry their laughter, their lessons, and the way they made you feel—tucked safely in a place where time can't touch it. Though love may change or drift with life's seasons, the memories remain warm and steady, a reminder that some connections never truly disappear.

When Glenn and I first met you, you would tell us stories of yours and your wife's adventures the love you have for her will always be remembered. Our condolences to you and the family.

Hello to all of those who are no doubt suffering from this tragic loss. May the God of peace send His Holy Angels to surround the Swiger family. None of us know when our final hour will come I must say though if she could say something to ease all your pain I am sure she would. She is now safely in the arms of Jesus where love everlasting reigns and no tears no pain but eternal peace for you Lori
